Tribute Wall

“ It's nearing 2 years since she was released from suffering. I look at pictures of her when she was healthy and it makes me sad that she is gone. I am glad she no longer feels pain and lives in misery. Not knowing what day she would feel well enough to play with her kids was painful in itself. Her kids keep us going today. They are her in every way. You can't take their memory of her away from them. They remember her and love her still everyday just as we all do. Sheila was my soul everything, my soul sister, my daughter, my soul entity as much as anyone can be. Our souls were and are intertwined. June 23 is a day I will never forget and I miss her more today then ever before.
